Namazu Cloud Account

Namazu Cloud · https://namazustudios.com/docs/namazu-cloud/namazu-cloud-account/

Your account is your identity in Namazu Cloud: how you sign up, sign in, keep a session, verify your email, and sign in with Google. The Account page of the portal is where you manage it. Organizations are attached to your account, not to a device, so signing in from anywhere brings you back to the same organizations and instances.

Signing Up

Create your account with a user name, email address, and password, with optional first and last names. After sign-up you are signed in automatically and land on the dashboard. The first thing you will do there is create an organization; see Namazu Cloud Organizations.

Signing In

Sign in with your user name and password. You can choose to stay signed in, which keeps the session across browser restarts. Alternatively, if Google sign-in is enabled for the portal, a Google button appears on the sign-in page and logs you in through OIDC instead of a password.

Every action your browser takes against Namazu Cloud is authorized with your `Elements-SessionSecret`. Signing out (the logout option in the Account page) invalidates the current session secret, so a signed-out browser can no longer make authenticated calls until you sign in again.

Email Verification

The Account page shows the verification status of the email on your profile. If it is not yet verified, send a verification email from the Account page and follow the link it contains; the portal then reflects the verified status.

Verified email matters in a few places:

- Accepting an organization invitation requires a verified email address.
- Namazu Cloud sends operational email, such as invite notifications, to the email on your profile.

Pending Invitations

If another organization has invited you, the portal surfaces the pending invitation. Accept to join with the invited role, or decline to dismiss it. Because invitations are tied to your account rather than to a browser, you can accept from any device you are signed into. See Organizations for how invitations work.
